God loves me the way I am?

This statement is partially true because God does love us. He sent the one who was most precious to him, down to the earth to die for us. Christ would go through some horrific trials during this time. If he did not love us, then he wouldn't have died for us.

With that said, we must understand that God calls us to be changed. What does this mean? Well, the gospel demands an answer and that is to repent. Throughout scripture we see that Christ called the people to repent. This means we were to put off sin and return to God; not a simple sorry.

Sin separates us from God, so there must be change in our life. God knows we will not be perfect, but he calls us to a higher standard than those in the world. Do we answer that call or do we go along with the world. People use this statement to justify sin.

Here is a better way to speak this statement, God loves me where I am but refuses to leave where I am or God loves me but calls me to be what I ought to be in Christ. These are more biblical accurate statements. Why not change today and put on Christ?
